CHIEF ENGINEER'S REPORT. General Humphreys, Chief Engineer of the army, has submitted his report for the fiscal year ending June 30th to the Secretary of War. He says material progress has been made during the year upon those portions of the sea coast and lake frontier defenses not the sea coast and lake frontier defenses not affected by the questions respecting the increased use to be made of iron in covering and protecting guns and gunners' searfs against the action of projectiles of very large caliber. He thinks this special question of armor demands deliberate and prolonged examination. The restoration of forts on the Southern sea coast has been commenced, and a large por-

Our merchant, and manufacturers won't avail themselves of it if you build it for them. They won't try to make a trade there—they won't sen'd an advertisement or a drummer, and they won't go themselves. They say its no use Indians will go to Cincinnati anyhow. O course she will in the present state of thinga—strange if she didn't! Are our merchants lazy, or are they a little bit afraid of spirited competition? I feel a little like saying somet ing about the difference between time sales and large profits, and short sales with small profits, but I won't, for I'm talking about rallroads.

**Let me tell you a little story. Few years ego I was in Francesville—smart little town sbout two hundred and afty miles from here, right upon our railroad from New Albany—the Louisville, New Albany, and Chieago Railroad. There were half a dozon good stores and, for the size of the place an active trade there. I did not find a man—and I inquired—who had ever bought a dollar's worth of goods here, and when I expressed my surprise at this, perhaps reproachfully, one rather apologetically stated he bought his candles in New Albany. Cincinnati, St. Louis, Chicago, Philadelphia, and Lafayette supplied them with goods, Cincinnati mainly and little Lafayette pretty largely. They were surprised at the population of Louisville. but I won't, for I'm talking about railroads.

Associated in business with his father from his carly years, he learned his habits and followed his example. The power and benefit of money being one of the first things he was laught, it is not strange he has remembered his early lesson through all his years. Instead of decreasing the wealth he inherited, he has largely increased it, and has been for years the richest citizen of the United States. B., an officer in the srmy on the retired list, was charged with having unlawfully entered into the inarried state with that veteran warrior, during the lifetime of her husband, Alexander Victor. This lifegal marriage took place twenty-one years ago—the larly being described in the certificate as Eliza Haines, spinster, and the certificate as Eliza Haines, spinster, and chann, and Kright Commender of the letth." But it appears that nine years before this interesting event, that is to say, in 1858, the fair Eliza had been led to the hymeneal star by Alexander Victor, of Verssilles, and that Victor still was in the land of the living. The first marriage took place at $1. Rollens, in the isle of Jersey, where Victor was a teacher of the French language. Antor has none of his father's liking for trade. He deals altogether in real estate, and in leases of property owned by Trinity church, a corporation worth $100,000,000. He has a wonderful memory. He can tell every square the condition of the penny. He was, the exact date at which such property he is buying constantly, and will be to his dying day, though it can not be many years before he will be obliged to exchange all his valuable sites and acree for a three by seven lot in a corner of Long Island. He scarcely ever improves any of his real estate. He buys if for an advance, and lets it go only when he thinks it has reached its maximum rate.

Without divalging his purpose, Mr. Sister took the lunatic in charge and loitered and rode about with him until he received orders from his father at Hopkinsville to keep bim in custody regardless of expense and deliver him into the hands of his family. When overtaken, Poindexter conversed very rationally and at no time exhibited signs of insantly, but to guard against his elopement Mr. Slater stupefied him with liquor. In this condition he was taken to the Police Shaperintendent's office and comfortably lodged for the night. He will be taken to Hopkinsville by his captor this morning.

We understand that Poindexter had been confined in the asylum but a short time. He was sent there by his family in the hope that he might be restored to soundness of mind. The cause of his madness is said to have

He is sadly prone to vagabondism and all its attendant evils. Such we know to be all its attendant evils. Such we know to be the leading propensities as developed here. The city is more completely overrun with Sambo and his progeny at present than ever before. The case is a very peculiar one, and it is admitted that he is perfectly sane on all subjects save one, and that is animal magnetism or mesmerism, and on that he entertains the most radical and extravagant ideas.

Mr. Sadier is an Englishman by birth, is about 55 years of age, above the medium hight of men, sallow complexion, light frame, hair slightly mixed with gray, and a medan-holy expression of the countenance that seemed to of operations in our brickyards and other manufactories—but the great majority of them are idle and vicious from deliberate choice. He lives three miles from Louisville on the Cane run road; is a man of excellent education, and converses freely and rationally on the most difficult subjects of science and literature. He was for many years a school-teacher in that neighborhood, where he has lived for thirty years, and borne a good reputation as such. Among the witnesses were Gor. There has been for several days a fair local demand for flour in this market, and some transactions have been made on speculation, parties believing that prices have touched bottom. In grain holders of wheat give it as their opinion that prices must advance at an early day. This expectation is based upon the supposition that farmers will from this time forward hold crops out of the market, and that this will advance prices by creating scarrity. We believe all such advice had, and are condident that those who follow it will have cause for regrets. The New York Journal of Commerce of the left reviews the question of breadstuffs at some length; points out the arguments such to induce farmers to send their grain forward. It also reviews the ill-advised arguments of those who, urged a different pottey, and says:
